UK Outlook for Tuesday 13 Jul 2021 to Thursday 22 Jul 2021:
Showers are expected to affect parts of the UK at first - these are most likely across northern and eastern areas with a good deal of dry weather elsewhere. During the second half of next week conditions are expected to become more settled with dry and bright weather developing for many areas. Some light showers are still possible in places, particularly in the northwest and southeast. Temperatures are likely to be around average, perhaps above average by the end of the week. Beyond this, warmer and drier than average conditions are most likely. The occasional unsettled spell of weather is still possible, particularly over northwestern areas, but overall most places will probably be mostly fine and dry. Temperatures are expected to rise above average.
